

Passionate about POLITICS?

Consider a PhD in Political Science at CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY

The Department of Political Science at Concordia University now offers a doctoral degree. Our faculty expertise and the unique opportunities afforded by Montreal living provide a challenging and exciting advanced degree experience.

Pictured, back row, left to right: Francesca Scala (Public Policy), James B. Kelly (Canadian Politics) and Marlene K. Sokolon (Political Theory).
Front row, left to right: Peter J. Stoett (Chair of the Department, International Relations), Axel Huelsemeyer (Graduate Program Director, International Political Economy) and Csaba Nikolenyi (Comparative Politics).

Scholarly excellence and methodological diversity characterize the faculty at the Department of Political Science, where a collegial atmosphere provides both a comfortable working environment and opportunities for open discussion and debate. We have more than 30 highly qualified full-time professors from a wide variety of methodological and life-experience backgrounds, and at various stages in their careers. As a student, you will benefit from our emphasis on accessibility to professors, our dedication to producing polished, professional-level doctorates, and engagement with the broader Concordia and Montreal academic community. As a teaching assistant, you will grow from exposure to the diverse student body at Concordia. Our goal is to assist doctoral students in their quest for self-development and long-term career interests in teaching and advanced research.

Department of Political Science
CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY
<http://politicalscience.concordia.ca>
Tel: 1-514-848-2424 ext. 2126 • Email: mpppa@alcor.concordia.ca

The PhD program facilitates intense study in five subfields of Political Science:

Canadian and Quebec Politics
Comparative Politics
International Relations

Political Theory
Public Policy and Administration

Detailed descriptions of the PhD program and faculty research interests are available online at:
<http://politicalscience.concordia.ca>

Application Deadline: The due date for completed applications is February 1 for September admission.

Concordia
UNIVERSITY